DESCRIPTION

This module aims to provide learners with the knowledge and skills to professionally perform their assignments efficiently and in accordance with international standards.

It covers a general overview of the reception context with an explanation of the different phases in the reception process and the main interpretation needed in reception, with a focus on a wide range of different situations interpreters in reception have to work in such as interpreting during the social intake, interpreting during a medical appointment, interpreting during psychological support, and interpreting for a group information session.

It prepares learners to apply this knowledge in the context of procedures, tasks and responsibilities of interpreters working in the reception context.
